

Wait Until 8th is a community of parents dedicated to helping families have a healthy relationship with technology. It was started to empower parents to say yes to waiting on the smartphone by signing the Wait Until 8th pledge. Now, more than 90,000 families have rallied together to delay giving children a smartphone until at least the end of 8th grade!

Beyond delaying the smartphone, digital training is necessary for families to use technology safely, appropriately, and moderately. Their digital training provides families with device & app reviews, the latest on parental controls, and family guides to keep your family on track for success in the digital arena. Whether you are contemplating giving your kid a phone or struggling with how to teach your kid how to use a smartphone, they've got your back!

We love their commitment to teaching families responsible technology use, and are happy to highlight them as a social account to follow. For more information, check out their website, Facebook, and Instagram pages.
